Man faces 19 charges after hit-and-run that injured police officer

Jason John Dunlop. 33-year-old accused of fleeing the scene after driving stolen truck into plainclothes cop

SARAH TAGUIAM

A man arrested in connection to a hit-and-run crash that injured a Regina police officer is facing 19 charges.

Jason John Dunlop, 33, was apprehended in the Argyle Park area in northwest Regina early Sunday after being sought for weeks on a Canada-wide warrant for being unlawfully at large from a correctional facility in Red Deer, Alta.

According to police spokeswoman Elizabeth Popowich, it appears that

Jason John Dunlop is facing 19 charges following a crash that injured a police officer. COURTESY REGINA POLICE Dunlop had allegedly violated conditions of his statutory release.

Dunlop is accused of driving a stolen truck that hit the male plainclothes officer on May 14 on Angus Street near Saskatchewan Drive.

"He fled the scene and actively avoided our attempts to locate him until this weekend," Popowich alleged.

Regina police conducted a further investigation after the arrest and laid more charges against Dunlop on Monday.

"We think that he's been involved in other criminal activity between May 14 and his arrest of June 1," Popowich said, noting Dunlop is also charged "with possession of methamphetamine and stolen property."

Dunlop, a Regina resident who had lived in Red Deer, is charged with fleeing from a peace officer, failing to stop at the scene of an accident involving bodily harm, resisting arrest, assault with a weapon and four counts of possession of stolen property over $5,000, among other alleged crimes.

Dunlop appeared in court in Regina on Monday.

The officer continues to recover from injuries suffered in the collision.

Buckingham controversyU of S appoints acting provost

The University of Saskatchewan has named an acting provost to replace a man who quit last month during the Robert Buckingham firing controversy.

Ernie Barber, who has been with the university for 33 years, takes on the job July 1.

Barber is currently the managing director of the Global Institute for Food Security.

His replacement is to be named in the coming weeks.

Buckingham was fired last month for speaking out about budget cuts at the school but was rehired after a national outcry.

Gordon Barnhart, interim president of the university, had nothing but praise for Barber.

"Given Ernie's long history at the university, including serving once already as acting provost, I know he will help us stabilize and move forward ... as we continue to enhance our academic excellence and strive for financial sustainability," Barnhart said on Monday in a release.

Third homicidePolice name shooting victim, continue to seek more information

City police have released the name of a man shot dead last week in Regina's third homicide of the year.

Roba Osman, 24, of Toronto, was shot at a house at 609 Williams St.

in northwest Regina on May 27.

Two other men were injured in the incident.

Police spokesman Leslie Parker couldn't confirm whether the injured men live at the home.

No charges have been laid in the case, and Regina police are encouraging anyone with information on the incident to call them at 306-777-6500.

Two new police units tasked with traffic safety overhaul

Cracking down. Tough laws, enforcement to fix Saskatchewan's 'abysmal' safety record

JACOB MORGAN
Metro in Saskatoon

Police in Saskatchewan are setting up a support system to enforce tough new laws.

Provincial government officials joined members of the RCMP and the Saskatoon Police Service on Monday to announce the launch of two units dedicated to traffic safety, in response to legislation that will see harsher penalties for impaired, distracted and reckless drivers.

"The new legislation is strong, but legislation is only as good as the enforcement behind it," Donna Harpauer, minister responsible for Saskatchewan Government Insurance, said at Saskatoon police headquarters.

Harpauer added that Saskatchewan has an "abysmal" track record "when it comes to collisions and accidents within our province per capita, compared to other provinces."

According to Transport Canada's 2011 report on collision statistics, Saskatchewan had 14.2 road fatalities per 100,000 people — far above the national average of 5.8 — that year.

Brenda Butterworth-Carr, commanding officer of the RCMP in Saskatchewan, said a total of 60 officers will be assigned to the units dispersed in high-risk districts from North Battleford and Saskatoon to the Estevan and Weyburn areas.

They include 30 officers paid through SGI, 25 reallocated within the RCMP and five from Saskatoon police.

SGI is providing approximately $2.4 million this year for the 30 extra staff, while the province currently funds the other 30.

Butterworth-Carr said the RCMP and Saskatoon officers will work together "to make sure we do everything we possibly can to interdict, prevent as well as enforce when it pertains to behaviour we see on our highways."

The revamped legislation will take effect on June 27.

The changes include increasing licence suspensions for drivers caught under the influence of drugs or alcohol, forcing convicted impaired drivers to pay for temporary ignition interlock devices and seizing vehicles from drivers caught using cellphones twice within a year for up to seven days.

Man charged in abduction of former fiancée

A 36-year-old man is to appear in court on Tuesday to face numerous charges related to the abduction of his former fiancée.

Clint McLaughlin is accused of aggravated assault, kidnapping, unlawful confinement and breach of recognizance.

Mariana Cracogna was found east of Saskatoon by a motorist on Sunday after police say she was taken against her will on Friday afternoon.

Cracogna, 26, managed to escape from her captor and was taken to hospital for treatment of serious but non-life-threatening injuries.

"She managed, after two days without food and water, to make her way to a highway and a passing motorist was able to pick her up," Saskatoon police spokeswoman Alyson Edwards told reporters.

"This speaks to her strength — just immense amounts of strength — to be able to get herself out of that situation."

Police had issued a description of a vehicle they believed was connected to the case. A farmer found the Ford Explorer on his land on Sunday and a search team was brought in.

McLaughlin was found a few hours later on a rural road, also by a passing driver. Police said he had also been without food or water. He was treated in hospital and released.

Cracogna's brother Pablo told CKOM his sister is doing well.

"(It is) essentially a big weight off our shoulders. I'm finally able to relax," he told the radio station.

Police said McLaughlin was known to them prior to the alleged abduction, but would not give details.

CKOM reported that McLaughlin was out on bail after being charged with assault, assault with a weapon causing bodily harm and forcible confinement involving another person.

The station reported that McLaughlin was a competitive kickboxer and used to be a bouncer at a bar in the city.

Bike Regina

Activists say bicycle access must be city's top priority

Regina cycling activists say improving bicycle access to heavily used downtown streets must be a priority in Regina's new transportation master plan if the city is truly serious about bolstering commuting options.

Luke Nichols, vice-president of media relations with Bike Regina, wants city hall to follow through on a plan to better connect cycling routes with other transportation infrastructure.

"It doesn't go to locations. It's more recreational," Nichols told Metro of the city's current cycling pathway system, adding that Bike Regina would like routes to connect riders from the suburbs to the downtown core.

Nichols cited a connected, cross-city cycling route as one of the community group's top priorities.

Bike Regina, he adds, has been a vigorous participant in a consultation process for sculpting the city's transportation master plan, which aims to create a framework for addressing the needs of the next 25 years.

The expansive strategy recently finished its final round of public consultations. Its final draft is expected to come before city council late this summer or early in the fall.

"We're integrating those comments (from the consultations) into the final report and we're working on our implementation and financing plan," explained Kelly Scherr, director of construction and compliance with the City of Regina.

Open houses, Scherr said, have identified substantial support from the public for the draft transportation plan, especially for measures centred on improving cycling and transit.

"(There's been) a lot of support for the multi-nodal nature of the plan, for it being well-integrated and for it reflecting public comments," she added.

Festival promises to jazz its way into Reginans' hearts

Victoria Park. More shows, higher-profile performers in lineup

sarah.taguiam@metronews.ca

Music lovers can treat their ears to six days of bopping and grooving when JazzFest Regina doubles its shows and adds more world-class acts to the festival, which begins on June 10.

"It's going to be much bigger than last year," Peter Champagne, JazzFest's executive producer, said on Monday as the annual event's lineup was announced at the University of Regina's Darke Hall.

"The interest has always been there, and the city has great jazz roots — but now, we're trying to bring them all to this part of the province. Because Regina deserves it."

The festival will run from June 10 to 15, adding a multicultural focus and a sixth day to what has traditionally been a five-day event.

Jazz acts will perform more than 30 free shows at Victoria Park and across downtown — more than double the number held last year.

"Our level of headliners is also much more elevated and stronger than what we've had in the past," Champagne added.

Headliners include Belle Plaine and The Unrequited Love, Jeffery Straker, Alexander Brown Quintet, Brandi Disterheft Trio and Iroko Project Salsa Dance Party.

Tickets are priced from $15 to $30 and information is available at jazzregina.ca.

Another headliner, Juno Award-winning pianist and composer David Braid will open the festival at Darke Hall by playing a $250,000 Fazioli piano recently donated to the University of Regina.

Proceeds from this event will go to the university's College Avenue Campus Renewal Project.

South Africa's Lorraine Klaasen, who sang at Nelson Mandela's funeral, will perform a free show at City Square Plaza.

Executive producer Peter Champagne announces the lineup for JazzFest Regina at Darke Hall on Monday as Jeremy Sauer plays the piano. Headlining acts include Juno Award-winning pianist David Braid, Regina's Jeffery Straker and South African songstress Lorraine Klaasen. SARAH TAGUIAM/METRO

Study: Hurricane Glen is scary, but Hurricane Glenda is deadly

What's in a name?

Experiments show people are more likely to flee storms with masculine monickers

People are slightly less likely to flee an oncoming storm with a feminine name than a masculine one, a new study finds.

But hurricanes with feminine names turn out to be deadlier in the United States than their more macho-sounding counterparts, probably because their monikers make people underestimate their danger, the researchers conclude.

In fact, the two deadliest storms to make landfall in the U.S. since 1979, when male names were introduced, were named Katrina and Sandy.

The study, which didn't involve any experts in meteorology or disaster science, was published Monday in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

In six different experi-

This 2012 photo shows a pile of sand and debris sitting near a house that was damaged by Superstorm Sandy in Brant Beach, N.J. ments, more than 1,000 test subjects told behavioural scientists at the University of Illinois in Champaign that they were slightly more likely to evacuate from an oncoming storm named Christopher than Christina, Victor than Victoria, Alexander than Alexandra and Danny than Kate. They found female names less frightening.

"People are looking for meaning in any information that they receive," said study co-author Sharon Shavitt, a professor of marketing. "The name of the storm is providing people with irrelevant information that they actually use."

Shavitt said both men and women rated female storms less scary and they both "are likely to believe that women are milder and less aggressive."

It fits with other research about gender perception differences, she said. Sandy, while it can also be a male name, was chosen as a female name by weather authorities in 2012.

Shavitt said it also ranked as rather feminine when she asked a small group of people to assess names on a masculine-feminine scale.

Hurricane and disaster science experts, such as Massachusetts Institute of Technology's Kerry Emanuel, were skeptical at first. Then after more consideration, some — but not all — found merit in the work, noting that it is more about psychology rather than physical science.

Emanuel said confusion over whether 2012's Sandy was called a hurricane or post-tropical storm did cause confusion, so maybe names could make a difference too. He joked that maybe names matter and perhaps meteorologists should start using scarier-sounding ones like Jack the Ripper or King Kong.

But Susan Cutter, director of the University of South Carolina's Hazards and Vulnerability Research Institute, dismissed the idea that female-named storms are deadlier. She considered the study results just coincidence.

Nova Scotia. Social media sites ordered to hand over info to help ID cyberbully

A unique Nova Scotia law aimed at squelching online harassment is being used for the first time to reach beyond Canada's borders to determine the identity of a cyberbully.

The province's CyberScan unit said Monday a Nova Scotia Supreme Court judge issued an order last week under the province's new Cyber-safety Act demanding information from Google, Facebook, Instagram, Pinterest, Snapchat and Canada's BCE Inc.

"It is the first order in Canada for that purpose," said Roger Merrick, the province's director of public safety. "It's groundbreaking for us."

The court order is seeking records that could identify the accused cyberbully, including home addresses, email addresses, user names, given names, account names and IP addresses.

The case involves a young woman in Halifax who has recently received threatening and harassing messages from an unknown person or persons accused of hacking her social media accounts, Merrick said.

"I can't give you too much information for fear of jeopardizing the investigation," said Merrick, adding that police are also investigating.

The CyberScan unit has yet to hear from any of the companies involved and the process could take months to complete, Merrick said.

He said police routinely issue production orders when seeking information from online sources while investigating criminal matters, including child exploitation cases. If the information sought is found in the United States, police turn to the Treaty on Mutual Legal Assistance to guide them. In this case, the CyberScan unit is relying on civil law procedures.

"This is the first one for us ... (and) there may be a different process," Merrick said, adding there's no guarantee the companies will recognize the court order. "This is a learning process for us, too."

Sex work. Survey reveals opinion split on key issues of prostitution legality

The results of a federal consultation on prostitution suggest a lack of consensus among people and groups interested in the subject.

A slight majority of those who responded to the Justice Department's month-long online consultation earlier this year felt that purchasing sexual services should be a criminal offence.

However, two-thirds of the more than 31,000 respondents said selling sex should not be an offence.

About six in every 10 participants said benefiting economically from the prostitution of an adult should be illegal.

The department received comments from 117 organizations, but did not reveal who they were.

Justice Minister Peter MacKay tweeted that the findings would be taken into account in coming legislation on prostitution.

Questions mount over deal to save U.S. soldier

A Pentagon investigation concluded in 2010 that Army Sgt. Bowe Bergdahl walked away from his unit, and after an initial flurry of searching the military decided not to exert extraordinary efforts to rescue him, according to a former senior defence official.

Instead, the U.S. government pursued negotiations to get him back over the following five years of his captivity — a track that led to his release over the weekend.

Bergdahl, 28, is hospitalized in Germany as questions mount in the U.S. over the swap that resulted in his freedom in exchange for the release of five detainees who were sent to Qatar from the U.S. prison in Guantanamo, Cuba.

Even in the first hours of Bergdahl's handoff to U.S. special forces in eastern Afghanistan, it was clear this would not be an uncomplicated celebration. Five terrorist suspects also walked free, stirring a debate over whether the exchange would heighten the risk of other Americans being snatched as bargaining chips and whether the released detainees — several senior Taliban figures among them — would find their way back to the fight.

U.S. officials said Sunday that Bergdahl's health and safety appeared in jeopardy, prompting rapid action. "Had we waited and lost him," said national security adviser Susan Rice, "I don't think anybody would have forgiven the United States government." She said he had lost considerable weight and faced an "acute" situation.

On Monday, a U.S. military hospital in Germany reported Bergdahl in "stable condition and receiving treatment for conditions requiring hospitalization" after arriving from Afghanistan.

Republicans in the U.S. said the deal for Bergdahl's release could set a troubling precedent. Sen. John McCain said of the Guantanamo detainees who were exchanged for him: "These are the hardest of the hard core."

Tireless campaigners for their son's freedom, Bob and Jani Bergdahl thanked all who were behind the effort to retrieve him.

"You were not left behind," Bob Bergdahl told reporters in Boise, Idaho, as if speaking to his son.

"We are so proud of the way this was carried out."

Immunotherapy. New treatment boosts body's ways of fighting cancer

Two years ago, Arrica Wallace was riddled with tumors from widely spread cervical cancer that the strongest chemotherapy and radiation could not beat back. Today, the Kansas mother shows no signs of the disease, and it was her own immune system that made it go away.

The experimental approach that helped her is one of the newest frontiers in the rapidly advancing field of cancer immunotherapy, which boosts the body's natural ways of attacking tumors.

At a conference in Chicago on Monday, doctors also reported extending gains recently made with immune therapies against leukemia and the skin cancer melanoma to bladder, lung and other tumour types.

The cervical cancer experiment was the first time an immune therapy has worked so dramatically against a cancer caused by a virus — HPV. In a pilot study by the National Cancer Institute, the tumors of two out of nine women completely disappeared and those women remain cancer-free more than a year later. That's far better than any other treatment has achieved in such cases.

Doctors are trying it now against throat, anal and other cancers caused by HPV, the human papillomavirus, and think it holds promise for cancers caused by other viruses, too.

Wallace lives in Manhattan, Kansas, west of Topeka, and was 35 when her cervical cancer was discovered. It spread widely, and one tumour was so large it blocked half of her windpipe. Doctors said she had less than a year to live.

She enrolled in the study, and researchers removed one of her tumors, isolated special immune system cells that were attacking it, multiplied them in the lab and gave billions of them back to her in a one-time infusion. They also gave her drugs to boost her immune response.

"It's been 22 months since treatment and 17 months of completely clean scans" showing no sign of cancer, Wallace said.

Doctors are trying the treatment on several dozen more women with advanced cervical cancer and it could someday be offered at many cancer centres the way bone marrow and stem cell transplants are now.

New Canada Conference. Young people invited to brainstorm Canada's future

JESSICA SMITH CROSS
Metro in Toronto

In order to celebrate Canada's past, bright young Canadian residents are going to brainstorm our country's future.

On the sesquicentennial of the 1864 Charlottetown Conference — that's 150 years after the conference that laid the groundwork for Canadian Confederation — the "New Canada Conference" will be held in Charlottetown as a flagship event in P.E.I. in 2014.

Canadians and permanent residents aged 19 to 24 (as of Sept. 1) are invited to apply to become one of the 100 delegates who will receive an all-expenses paid trip to Charlottetown for the conference, from Aug. 31 to Sept. 3.

There they will participate in a brainstorming session about the future of the country with the help of some yet-to-be announced prominent Canadians.

"The vision of Confederation was first articulated in Prince Edward Island and Prince Edward Island was the birthplace of Confederation," said Penny Walsh McGuire, the CEO of PEI 2014.

Walsh McGuire said she hopes to be surprised by the ideas from the young people. The application process requires a 150-second video or 400-word essay telling the applicant's story of Canada, and two references.

More details are available at ncc-cnc.ca.

Looking ahead

The discussions will concentrate on these areas:

- Civic engagement and community
- Technology and media, wealth and prosperity
- Ecology and resources
- Canada's place in the world
- Justice and equity
- Arts and creativity
- Learning and social development

New search begun in case of girl missing seven years

Portugal. Three-year-old Madeleine McCann vanished from a resort room in 2007

Police investigating the disappearance of Madeleine McCann on Monday cordoned off scrubland near the Portuguese resort where the British girl vanished seven years ago.

Officers placed yellow-and-white police tape around the waste ground, which is larger than a soccer field and covered in bushes and some trees.

Officials have previously said detectives may use excavators, dogs and ground-penetrating radar as they scrutinize the terrain. Police kept watch over the area from an adjacent low hill.

Officials made no immediate comment on Monday's developments. Cases that are under investigation in Portugal are covered by a judicial secrecy law, which forbids the release of information.

The scrubland is about 300 metres from the Praia da Luz resort in southern Portugal where Madeleine vanished from her family's vacation apartment in May 2007, shortly before her fourth birthday. The area was searched in the days following her disappearance.

Authorities in Portugal and Britain said recently they would conduct new searches in coming weeks after reviewing the case file and a new public appeal for information.

Portuguese police closed the case in 2008 because authorities had detected no crime. The public prosecutor's office in Lisbon last year reopened the investigation, saying new leads emerged during the case review though it did not elaborate.

Water cannons disperse anti-rape protesters

Police used water cannons to disperse hundreds of women who were protesting Monday in Lucknow, India, against a rise in violence against women. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Police used water cannons Monday to disperse hundreds of women protesting violence against women in the northern Indian state where two teenagers were gang-raped and found hanging from a tree.

The protesters in Lucknow, the capital of Uttar Pradesh state, were demonstrating outside the office of Chief Minister Akhilesh Yadav, demanding that he crack down on rape and other violence against women and girls.

Hundreds of police officers, including female officers, pushed and shoved the protesters before deploying water cannons to disperse them.

They also demanded that the government curb police indifference, which they said was encouraging attacks against women.

Police in the tiny Uttar Pradesh village of Katra failed to take any action last week when the father of one of the girls reported to police that the two cousins were missing.

Two police officers were fired for dereliction of duty after the girls were found gang-raped and killed.

Yadav has recommended a federal inquiry, but his government has been widely accused of a lackadaisical approach toward women's safety.

Activists and ordinary people said it was as if nothing had changed in the way the police dealt with rape cases since the December 2012 fatal gang rape of a 23-year-old woman aboard a moving bus in New Delhi, the national capital.

The outcry following that attack led to laws doubling prison terms for rapists to 20 years and criminalizing voyeurism, stalking and the trafficking of women.

The law also makes it a crime for officers to refuse to register cases when complaints are made.

People also are beginning to speak up against violent crimes targeting women, and public protests against police inaction are common.

Records show a rape is committed every 22 minutes in India, though it's considered drastically underreported.

Victims and their families may not report the crime at all due to social stigma, frustration with court delays or harassment by police. And police may be reluctant to register cases in order to keep down crime figures.

New operating system unveiled at Apple conference

Worldwide developers event. Built-in health app also introduced in wake of Samsung rolling out fitness features in Galaxy S5

Apple's Mac operating system is getting a new design and better ways to exchange files, while new features in the software for iPhones and iPads include one for keeping tabs on your health.

Apple executive Craig Federighi pointed out that data from various fitness-related devices now live in silos, so you can't get a comprehensive picture of your health. That will change, he says, with HealthKit coming to the new mobile software, iOS 8.

Apple is also making it easier for various devices to work together. Macs and mobile gadgets will share more features, and you can share and sync files between the two more easily.

The company is previewing the new features at its 25th annual conference for software developers in San Francisco. The free updates will come this fall, though developers got a test version Monday. Here are the highlights on what's been announced and what's coming:

Changes to Mac computers:

- The next Mac system will be named Yosemite, after the national park, now that Apple is naming it after California locales rather than cats.

- You'll be able to search for content on the computer and on the Internet at once, similar to a feature available with Microsoft's Windows 8.

- Apple is expanding its iCloud storage service so that you can store and sync files of any type.

- The Mac's Safari Web browser will have more privacy controls and ways to share links more easily.

Changes to iPhones and iPads:

- Like the new Mac OS, the iOS 8 system will have a universal search tool, to cover both your device and the Internet. It will also get the iCloud Drive service.

- The new software will sport interactive notifications, so you can respond to a message without having to leave another app. It will have new gestures, such as double tapping to see a list of frequent contacts.

- iOS 8 will have a built-in health-management tool to help people track their vital signs, diet and sleeping habits. Apple's chief rival, Samsung Electronics Co., incorporated fitness-related features in its latest flagship phone, the Galaxy S5.

- Although the Mac and iOS systems are separate, Apple CEO Tim Cook says the two have been engineered to work seamlessly together.

San Francisco conference. Canadian students win the golden tech ticket

Top programmers who write software for Apple computers, phones and tablets plan their year around attending the company's annual Worldwide Developers Conference in San Francisco.

For 16-year-old Douglas Bumby of Vancouver, making the trip means missing a week of school.

But he got permission to play hooky for a few days after being named by Apple as one of 200 winners of its scholarship program with a free ticket to the five-day event.

Bumby, along with six other Canadians, gets to rub shoulders with other software developers and be among the first to hear about new software enhancements Apple intends to push out.

"I'm really excited," said Bumby. THE CANADIAN PRESS

THAT'LL BE THREE LOBSTERS EVEN

On a recent trip to Prince Edward Island, I met a fisherman on his way to see a man about a lobster — three lobsters, in fact. The fresh-caught seafood was his form of payment to a kind neighbour who had recently fixed his computer. I heard similar stories from farmers who trade food among their friends, offering eggs for produce and beef for pork. Intrepid locals from across the region are able to feed themselves without any sort of official cash transaction.

Bartering was once a ubiquitous method of payment used around the globe long before currency was introduced. And while this ancient economic model might seem better suited to rural communities, I think there are plenty of ways urbanites can cash in (so to speak) on the trend by outsourcing their skills outside of the current capitalist system.

Swapsity and similar online communities match users based on needs and desires. Users can barter almost anything — skills, services and stuff — to trade what they have for what they want. It's an appealing idea, turning a few hours of babysitting into a bag full of clothes or swapping a stack of used books for a ride to the airport.

Home Exchange and Couchsurfing offer vacation-specific swapping services for travellers looking for beds in foreign countries. There are even business-to-business trading sites that give emerging and established companies the chance to exchange professional services in the name of business development.

The barter system isn't a perfect economic model. It's hard to evaluate goods and services against one another without a formal pricing model. We currently need to quantify goods and services on a mass scale — a banana is 59 cents, a plane ticket to Europe is $989 — but when it comes to bartering among individuals, price and value become more relative. Is an hour of babysitting equivalent to an hour of personal training? Perhaps it is to you.

Unfortunately I can't pay off my property tax bill by offering the city a few hours of free landscaping work. There will always be a need for some form of legal tender — whether or not old-fashioned cash and coins become obsolete in favour of bitcoins or another form of electronic currency.

But it's an empowering feeling to get what you want and help others without having to bother with any sort of monetary transaction.

The barter system works because we can play to our strengths and find creative solutions to obtain what we need without spending a cent.

Seeing Japan in a new light

It's known as the Land of the Rising Sun, but in these photos, Japan is the land of zipping fireflies, sparkling squid and volcanic lightning.

In his vivid images ranging from the erupting Sakurajima volcano to a forest bathed in the ethereal glow of fireflies in flight, photographer Takehito Miyatake explores the interplay between what he describes as the "light of Japan" and the natural landscape.

METRO

Sparse verse serves as inspiration

Miyatake was inspired by waka, a minimalist style of Japanese poetry that consists of five lines in a 5-7-5-7-7 metre.

"Both waka and photography can express nature concisely. With photography it can be a single image, with waka it is a poem of limited words, but also profound."

His photographs are on display at Steven Kasher Gallery in New York City until June 7.

Lone Survivor

Director. Peter Berg

Stars. Mark Wahlberg,
Taylor Kitsch

Lone Survivor is a serious change for the better for Battleship bomb maker Peter Berg. It's based on the thoughtful memoirs of now-retired Navy SEAL Marcus Luttrell, the sole man left alive out of 20 U.S. soldiers caught in a 2005 firefight in the mountains of Afghanistan's Kunar province. For all of its macho intensity — booming bullets, whirling chopper blades and falling bodies — Lone Survivor isn't just another war movie. We see the conflict from both sides, although the American one gets the most screen time and our immediate sympathies. Mark Wahlberg plays Luttrell, part of a "fire team" quartet of SEALs dropped by helicopter into a mountainous Taliban stronghold. The others are team leader Michael "Murph" Murphy (Taylor Kitsch), gunner's mate Danny "Danny Boy" Dietz (Emile Hirsch) and sonar ace Matthew "Axe" Axelson (Ben Foster). The actors are almost unrecognizable behind scruffy beards but they all deliver the goods.

Chef is a little movie with lots of meat

The power of drama.

Director Jon Favreau says this small film packs as much punch as his blockbuster work like Iron Man

scene@metronews.ca

The director who used elaborate special effects to make Iron Man soar through the night sky and a spaceship land in the Wild West says, "there is nothing more cinematic and exciting than watching food be prepared."

Jon Favreau, helmer of blockbusters like Iron Man 1 and 2 and Cowboys & Aliens, adds, "Modestly budgeted films like Eat Drink Man Woman or Jiro Dreams of Sushi are as compelling as any big budgeted Hollywood movie."

In his new film Chef (which he wrote, directed, produced and stars in), Favreau plays Carl Casper, a chef set on a new culinary path after an influential food critic gives his restaurant a savage review. The nugget of inspiration for the movie came two decades ago when Swingers, another film Favreau wrote and starred in, became a hit. "The Big Night came out the year Swingers did," he says, "and I remember seeing that film and feeling like they had really accomplished so much. With Swingers we had certain modest accomplishments. I was satisfied with it, but Big Night felt like a movie and felt like they had captured something larger. Maybe that was in the back of my head for the last 20 years. There was an envy that I had of what they were able to accomplish with the music, the culture, the performances, the food and how delightful it was. So I finally got to make my food movie."

In those 20 years, Favreau has been in the Hollywood trenches as a producer, director, actor and writer and is quick to note the similarities and differences between the story of Chef and his real-life work in the movie business.

"The archetypes of the players on the stage in the food world and the movie world are very similar," he says.

"The stakes are a bit higher in the food world, which is why it is dramatically appealing. One bad review can shut you down. Right now, the way reviews work in movies is that you're reading 90 reviews. It's all on Rotten Tomatoes, a compilation of numbers and you don't really have that personal relationship with a specific critic as you do in the theatre world or the food world. In the food world you are eye-to-eye with that critic and you are eye-to-eye with the customer and when that food gets sent back to the kitchen you are looking at that plate. It's a lot different."

Favreau's next film is a live-action remake of The Jungle Book, but he says he'll likely flip-flop between big- and small-budget films in future.

"If I knew I could come up with a small story that I'd be excited about, next year I'd do this again but honestly, it hasn't been since Swingers that I've been able to sit down and write something so fully formed so quickly. I somewhat envy the filmmakers who can come up with a small story each year because this was the best experience I've ever had."

Hammering down the perfect catch for Cruise

Tom Cruise has a new ally in his search for romance, as Armie Hammer's wife, Elizabeth Hammer, is reportedly on the case. "She's a very busybody matchmaker type and is seeking out the perfect woman for Tom — and she doesn't have to be famous, either. Tom is on the hunt for a new girl and appreciates Elizabeth's efforts," a source tells Radar Online of the friends, who met when Cruise was considering co-starring with Armie in the Man from U.N.C.L.E. "They really hit it off and he and his wife became Tom's besties. Elizabeth thinks the world of Tom and can't stand to see him alone. But whether his Scientology cronies approve of Elizabeth's match-making attempts remains to be seen."

Los Angeles Clippers co-owner Donald Sterling sits with V. Stiviano at a game in 2013.

Ex-girlfriend of Clippers owner claims she was attacked in New York

Donald Sterling's former girlfriend's troubles aren't over yet: Two men attacked V. Stiviano Sunday night in Manhattan as she was returning to her hotel, her lawyer claimed. Mac Nehoray told ABC News that the two attackers, described as white men, recognized Stiviano and followed her after she left the restaurant where she had dinner. They allegedly hit her in the face and used racial slurs. Nehoray says Stiviano was examined by a doctor and she's "banged up, but OK."

Stiviano did not file a police report about the incident, and police officials do not expect any arrests will be made. The attack was presumably related to Stiviano's role in releasing a recording of her former boyfriend Donald Sterling, co-owner of the Los Angeles Clippers, in which he made a string of racially offensive remarks. Sterling's wife Shelly has since negotiated a deal to sell the team to former Microsoft CEO Steve Ballmer for $2 billion US.

MELINDA TAUB

Metro World News

I don't know why I feel protective of Sandra Bullock. She's doing fine. She's very wealthy and famous. She makes hit movies where she plays astronauts and cops. She is still incredibly beautiful. If anything, she should feel protective of me, since I have none of those things (well, I am a stone cold fox). Still, I'm solidly in her corner, which is why I am so glad to hear that she might be dating Chris "Captain America"

Evans. Sandy has earned herself a hunk.

The Gravity star and Evans have reportedly begun seeing each other, though nothing serious is going on yet.

"They are not in a relationship, but they are definitely hanging out and are in the early getting-to-know-each-other phase," a source told E! News. "They haven't put a title on it, but they really like each other."

Evans and Bullock have been spotted dining together with friends several times this spring. The relationship would be a dream come true for Evans, who is 17 years Bullock's junior and says he had a big poster of Speed-era Sandra on his wall growing up.

They came in like a wrecking ball: Thieves plunder Miley's property

If anyone tries to sell you a white 2014 Maserati for cheap this week, think twice about taking the deal: Just such a car was stolen from Miley Cyrus' house this weekend. The LAPD are investigating a break-in at Miley's house on Saturday night. The singer was out of the country on tour, but her assistant noted that something seemed off about the house when she arrived on Sunday morning and called the cops, according to TMZ. One thing that was certainly off: Miley's car was gone. Thieves made off with the 2014 white Maserati Quattroporte, reportedly valued at $102,000, as well as some of Miley's jewelry. There was no sign of forced entry, but police say the suspects, a man and woman, scaled a fence and gained entry to Miley's garage.

It's apparently over again for Rihanna and Drake — at least as long as she wants it to be. "She gave him his marching orders and he's destroyed," a source says, according to Star magazine. "Drake was ready to walk away for good after Rihanna dropped him, but she has this power over him. All she needs to do is snap her fingers and he'll go running back to her. Drake is convinced that Rihanna has self-esteem issues and is pushing him away because she doesn't believe in or trust true love, which isn't

Keeping it au naturel

The Canadian Health Food Association (CHFA) has rounded up the most popular natural developments for the summer season from natural health retailers, suppliers and health experts. CHFA holistic nutritionist Michelle Book breaks down the Top 4.

IZABELA SZYDLO life@metronews.ca

Natural hydration

Three waters are making waves to help you stay hydrated this summer. The first is maple water, a new, trendy drink filled with minerals such as potassium, calcium, magnesium and manganese. Bonus? It's local! Then there's coconut water, an especially popular choice considered nature's "natural sports drink." Its sweet and nutty taste keeps thirst at bay, and it's high in potassium and electrolytes, and contains no artificial colours or sweeteners. Lastly there's Kombucha, another trendy drink. Found at your local health-food store, it is produced by fermenting black tea using a symbiotic colony of bacteria and yeast. Not only is it thirst quenching, it supports kidney and liver function. Although all these drinks do contain sugar, they have significantly less than many of the sports drinks, juices and sodas that tend to be so popular during the summer.

Natural skin care

When choosing sunscreen, I recommend a mineral-based one, which contains zinc oxide and titanium dioxide. Mineral-based sunscreens help to shield your skin by lying on the surface of the skin and reflecting potentially damaging UVA and UVB rays. There are many options that are also biodegradable and reef safe. Aloe vera is my go-to for soothing skin that has been in the sun. It can help to reduce the pain and irritation, and help to heal the delicate layers of your skin. When a sunburn does occur, more water is sent to the skin, so it's important to lock in that water with a good moisturizer to avoid dehydration. Don't confuse aloe with coconut oil, which is also a moisturizer that is seeing more attention this summer and is a great option to add to your summer skin-care regime.

Label literacy

More Canadians are demanding simple labelling. Common labels to look for are the Canadian Organic Symbol, GMO-free and fair trade. For the first, all foods with 95 per cent or more organic ingredients will have this logo on the package. Whenever possible, I recommend opting for organic. You are not only investing in your health, but also supporting sustainable environmentally friendly practices and animal welfare. GMO-free means the product does not contain any genetically modified organisms. While the debate surrounding GMO food continues, if this is of concern to you, I recommend going organic to ensure what you are eating has not been genetically modified. Fair trade has been created to achieve better trading conditions and to promote sustainable development. Products that are classified as fair trade have been produced to support greater equity by offering improved trading conditions and respecting the producers, who are often from developing countries.

Superfoods

Health experts are buzzing about watermelon and coconut. Watermelon is extremely hydrating and provides a lot of important minerals. It's a great source of lycopene, which is a potent antioxidant pigment with a growing list of benefits from prostate health to skin care. Coconut also continues to be all the rage this summer. It is being used in so many different and tasty ways — from ice cream to chips to coconut soy sauce. I personally love coconut chips, made from roasted slices of coconut. They can also be used as a topper to give your fresh summer salad a bit of extra crunch and flavour. Watermelon is always my go-to summer snack when it gets really hot. I keep it cut up in the fridge or I throw it into the blender with some ice and coconut water to make a 'slurpee.' Finally, seaweed snacks are great because they have no artificial colours or preservatives, and are virtually fat-free.

I could spend a few hundred words scaring you off ground meats or share how carcinogenic the charred proteins are.

But why bother? We will both be enjoying a few burgers regardless.

The trick is to minimize the damage and maximize the pleasure.

Do this:

- Always use a meat thermometer on ground meats. Insert it horizontally and check a couple of spots in the thickest part of the burger.
- Chicken, beef and salmon all need to be fully cooked to well done. One small speck of E. coli or salmonella can cause tremendous illness.
- Use moist and nutritious toppings to enhance flavour and juiciness.
- Some gourmet ingredients can up your game: ricotta cheese, blue cheeses, pesto sauce, a variety of mustards, fresh vegetables, baby lettuces and sprouts all add a burst of taste

- Go beyond the bun! Paleo-friendly lettuce, kale or nappa cabbage leaves make great bases. If you do choose bread, keep the burger-to-bun ratio in line and don't be afraid of different grains and alternative flavours.

Ingredients

- 4 chicken burgers
- 1 cup ricotta cheese
- 3 tbsp pesto sauce
- 4 ciabatta buns
- 1 cup pea sprouts or mixed sprouts
- Grainy mustard

Whether you make your burgers at home or choose a pre-made or frozen product, you don't have to go home. Gourmet toppings will heighten the taste and elevate the experience. Making sure that you add ingredients that boost moisture and flavour is easy with this recipe.

Mixing pesto sauce with ricotta cheese also makes a dip.

1. Fire up the grill and cook burgers thoroughly while you mix ricotta cheese and pesto sauce together.
2. Spread on both top and bottom of buns and add a big dollop to each burger once cooked.

Salad straight from Old MacDonald's farm

This recipe serves four. FIONN MACCOOL'S

No one will be able to resist this hearty salad made with roasted Yukon Gold potatoes, grilled red onion, and spinach tossed in a honey mustard vinaigrette and topped with bacon, green onions, and a hard-boiled egg.

If your diners like meat with their vegetables be sure to add strips of grilled chicken breast or flat iron steak.

1. Toss potato wedges in a stainless steel bowl with oil and a few pinches of salt and pepper.
2. Transfer wedges to roasting pan and roast in 425 F degree oven until golden brown, approx. 20 minutes.

3. Using same bowl, toss onion quarters in oil until evenly coated. Place quarters on a hot grill and cook until charred evenly on all sides. Spread petals apart to ensure even grilling. Onions are done when they smell sweet and have softened.

4. Toss baby spinach with honey mustard dressing, bacon bits and grilled onion. Place in serving bowl.

5. Top with potato wedges, hardboiled eggs and green on-

ion. Serve immediately. CHEF BRYAN JUREK OF FIONN MACCOOL'S

Ingredients

- 2 Yukon Gold potatoes, each cut into 8 wedges
- 1 tsp (5 ml) canola oil
- Salt and pepper
- 1 red onion, peeled, quartered
- 5 cups (1.25 litres) baby spinach
- 4 tbsp (60 ml) honey mustard dressing
- 6 slices bacon, cooked, finely chopped
- 4 eggs, hard boiled, quartered
- 1 bunch green onions, sliced thinly

NHL

Habs not yet a perennial title contender: GM

Reaching the NHL Eastern Conference final was nice, but the Montreal Canadiens have a long way to go to make it a habit.

That was the message Monday from general manager Marc Bergevin as he met with the media to review the season less than a week after the club was eliminated by the New York Rangers in six games.

"I feel we're not a mature team," he said. "We're a good team."

"We're moving forward, but there are teams I see around the league that are more mature. For them, you could almost say every year they're a guaranteed playoff team. But we're not there yet." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Talent will prevail

NHL playoffs. Rangers' Lundqvist is best goalie, but Kings are best team in Stanley Cup final

When asked shortly after his team's victory in Game 7 of the Western Conference final what he thought of the New York Rangers, Los Angeles Kings coach Darryl Sutter was his usual succinct self.

"Great goaltending," he said. "Great defence. Great forwards. Great special teams."

Sutter then said his team was "up against it" in this Stanley Cup final. Judging by gambling odds available and the Kings' recent playoff history, it would be foolish to call them underdogs.

No, Los Angeles is the best team in the 2014 cup final. And while New York has the series' best goaltender in Henrik Lundqvist, the Kings' talent advantage should give them their second championship in three years.

Since catching fire down the stretch in 2011-12, the Kings have been playoff monsters, eliminated only by last year's champions, the Chicago Blackhawks. Fourteen players are back from the last cup team, and while this group hasn't been as dominant as that one, it did become the first in NHL history to win three Game 7s to reach the final.

That led to plenty of talk from players after Sunday night's overtime victory in Chicago about resiliency and heart. More than anything, the Kings have talent.

There's leading scorer Anze Kopitar, who could be the Conn Smythe Trophy winner not too long from now. There are Canadian Olympians Drew Doughty and Jeff Carter, whose playoff performances match only their gold-medal success in Sochi.

And of course there's Jonathan Quick, who also isn't his 2012 playoff self but didn't suddenly become an average goaltender. He and his teammates beat three of the top five teams in the West to get to this point.

Lundqvist is the cup final's X-factor. The 32-year-old Swede, who won a gold medal at the 2006 Olympics, has been stellar in putting up a 2.03 goals-against average and .928 save percentage.

The Rangers are four wins away from their first title since 1994 because of Lundqvist. And if he manages to steal a couple of games, there could be another parade down Broadway.

To do that, though, the team in front of Lundqvist will have to help him stop Marian Gaborik (12 goals), Justin Williams (18 points), Tyler Toffoli (13 points), Dustin Brown (12 points), Tanner Pearson (12 points) and Jake Muzzin (12 points).

That Kings depth will be hard to deal with.

Pick: Kings in 7.

Copeland believes league's offer is strong

Redblacks offensive lineman Jon Gott gives instructions on Monday, the second day of training camp, at Keith Harris Stadium. PATRICK DOYLE/THE CANADIAN PRESS

CFL president Michael Copeland says the ongoing labour dispute between the league and its players could prevent the regular season from starting on time.

The 2014 campaign is scheduled to open June 26. But the league and CFL Players' Association are at an impasse and a potential players' strike threatens the season starting as planned.

"Of course there's concern (about regular season starting as scheduled)," Copeland, who is also the league's COO, said Monday. "I don't think we could be at this point in training camp and not be concerned."

"But at the same time I'd say I'm hopeful because I believe in the strength of our offer. I think when the players have some more time with it, they'll realize it's good for them, too. I'm hoping that can be basis of an agreement."

CFLPA president Scott Flory didn't return two telephone messages Monday.

The two sides haven't met since Thursday. Copeland said no new talks are scheduled.

Mind the gap

The league's offer calls for a $5-million salary cap while the players' association called for a $5.8-million salary cap increasing three per cent annually.

The CFL and players met for more than 17 hours over two days last week. Both the union and the league tabled offers that were rejected by the other side. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Back pain or not, Nadal owns Paris

Record-breaking. Spaniard wins 32nd straight match at French Open, faces Ferrer in quarter-final Maybe, just maybe, Rafael Nadal was a tad vulnerable, the thinking went before this French Open.

He had lost three times on his beloved red clay already this year, more defeats than he ever had on the surface before heading to Roland Garros.

Then came an admission, after the Grand Slam tournament's third round, that his back was bothering him and slowing his serves.

Well, leave it to the eight-time French Open champion's upcoming quarter-final opponent — 2013 runner-up David Ferrer, one of the men who beat Nadal on clay this spring — to set the record straight.

"Rafael," Ferrer said, "is always the favourite."

Nadal certainly looked the part in the fourth round Monday, when he won 18 points in a row during one stretch en route to beating 83rd-ranked Dusan Lajovic of Serbia 6-1, 6-2, 6-1 for a record 32nd consecutive victory at the French Open. That broke Nadal's own mark of 31 and moved him a step closer to a fifth straight title in Paris.

The No. 1-ranked Nadal, now 63-1 for his career at the tournament, has won all 12 sets he's played in Paris in 2014, dropping a total of 23 games. He was asked whether he would have preferred a more taxing encounter by now.

"You never know what's better," replied Nadal. "But, in theory, the theory says that it's better (to) win like this than win longer matches."

And his back? The one that flummoxed him during a loss in the Australian Open final in January, and then acted up Saturday, leading to an average first serve of 165 kilometres an hour and top speed of 184 km/h? It didn't appear to be as much of an issue against Lajovic: Nadal averaged 173 km/h, with a high of 192 km/h.

"My back can be pretty unpredictable," said Nadal, who wore thick vertical strips of athletic tape under his shirt. "I'm not lying. It's totally unpredictable. I don't want to speak too much about it."

OK, then.

Now he takes on No. 5 Ferrer, who eliminated No. 19 Kevin Anderson of South Africa 6-3, 6-3, 6-7 (5), 6-1.

Last year's French Open final is one of 21 losses for Ferrer in 27 matches against fellow Spaniard Nadal. But Ferrer won their most recent

Qatar 2022

FIFA VP denies corruption claims

FIFA vice-president and African football head Issa Hayatou has denied allegations in a British newspaper that he received free private medical treatment and other favours for backing Qatar to host the 2022 World Cup in a vote already marred by accusations of corruption and under investigation.

In a statement released late Sunday night, the Confederation of African Football called the string of allegations against its long-time president and one of FIFA's senior officials "fanatical" and "ridiculous."

The Sunday Times newspaper said that banned former Qatari official Mohamed bin Hammam, once a FIFA vice-president himself, had targeted Hayatou and other African football leaders with cash, luxury trips and other gifts and favours to support Qatar's ultimately successful World Cup bid.

In FIFA's votes four years ago, Russia won the hosting rights for the 2018 World Cup and Qatar the 2022 tournament.

Clubless. Lampard leaves Chelsea on eve of World Cup, fuels MLS rumours

England midfielder Frank Lampard is set to head to the World Cup without a club after announcing Monday that he is leaving Chelsea.

The 35-year-old Lampard has been at Chelsea for 13 years and is the club's all-time leading scorer but has not agreed to a new deal with the Premier League team. Lampard is currently with England in Miami for two World Cup warm-up matches before travelling to Brazil on Saturday.

"When I arrived at this fantastic club 13 years ago, I would never have believed that I would be fortunate enough to play so many games and enjoy sharing in so much success," Lampard said. "This club has become part of my life and I have so many people to thank for the opportunity."

Lampard did not say where he expects to play next season, but has long been linked with a move to Major League Soccer in the United States.

Lampard, who moved across London from West Ham in 2001, leaves Stamford Bridge with 211 goals in 648 appearances. He won the Premier League three times, the Champions League and Europa League once each, four FA Cups and two League Cups.

"The club will move forward, and as a Chelsea man I have no doubt that with the quality of the players that are there, they will continue with the success that we have all enjoyed over the past seasons," Lampard said.

Chelsea owner Roman Abramovich was singled out for praise, with Lampard calling the Russian tycoon "the man who saved our club and took us all to new levels" following his 2003 takeover.

Horoscopes

♈ Aries

March 21 - April 20

Focus on things that bring a smile to your face. The way you think about life will determine how enjoyable, or how difficult, it is going to be.

♉ Taurus

April 21 - May 21

Watch what you spend over the next 24 hours because if you go over the top you are sure to regret it. The planets warn you may not be as well off as you seem to believe. Watch out for hidden costs.

♊ Gemini

May 22 - June 21

Don't make too many plans today because most likely they will have to be changed. Just go with the flow and trust that the tide of events will wash you up some place that is to your liking.

♋ Cancer

June 22 - July 23

There is a danger you will believe the powers that be have got it in for you. Nothing could be further from the truth. Your only real enemy at is your overactive imagination!

♌ Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

This is probably not a good time to commit yourself to a new project. Certain people cannot be trusted, no matter how upbeat they may be about what you are doing together.

♍ Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

You have big ambitions and you have what it takes to reach the top. However, the planets warn if you act in haste you will regret at your leisure, so don't be too eager to follow your dream – it could turn into a nightmare.

♎ Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

Your confidence may be high but don't get carried away. There are things going on behind the scenes that suggest you could be in for a shock.

♏ Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

Don't lose your perspective and get angry about something that would not usually bother you. And don't worry too much if you lose out financially either – you'll more than make up for it later.

♐ Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

Keep the momentum going today because if you slow down, your energy could tail off dramatically. Also, don't attach too much importance to a relationship problem. It's not as bad as it seems.

♑ Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

You will be required to take on more tasks and responsibilities and though it may seem as if you are being unfairly restricted, you will be repaid in full later.

♒ Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

Life seems more vibrant and exciting now and in a way that's strange as nothing much has actually changed. What is different is your attitude: You are determined to find silver linings everywhere.

♓ Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

Your feelings will be rather intense over the next 24 hours. If you prefer to live more through your heart than your head that's quite all right. Nothing bad will come of it. SALLY BROMPTON
